Profile

I am an instinctive, results driven individual with a pragmatic approach to design. My hands-on experience working in and with the construction industry gives my approach a grounding in reality that I feel is necessary when bringing an idea into fruition. Starting my design career from an interior design perspective, my growing fascination for the built environment inevitably lead me into architecture where my long-harbored admiration for nature intertwines with my desire to create seamless, well being enhancing programs that allow people to instinctively interact with the natural world.

Design Skills: With on site experience of surveying existing spaces, working with clients to create a proposal and collaborating with contractors to bring the design to reality, I understand all to well the subtle nuances between each facet of the design process and how important it is to balance expectations with realities.
